Stricken Areas Get Tips on Assistance

(COURIER NEWS SERVICE)
Federal and state officials planned meetings at Oelwein and Charles City Wednesday to outline what loan and disaster relief money is available to tornado devastated communities in Northeast Iowa.

The meetings were scheduled despite the fact that the area has not, as yet, been declared a "major" disaster area. It has been declared a "disaster area" by the Small Business Administration.

Kent Hutton, disaster assistance coordinator for this area for the Office of Emergency Planning, said that Gov. Hughes' request for help asked for "all federal aid possible." He said this puts all federal agencies into operation to provide all the assistance possible under their own authority.

Presidential Declaration

Hutton said to have the area declared a "major" disaster area, the governor must request a presidential declaration through the OEP regional office which surveys the damage and would evaluate the request and make recommendations to the president. If warranted, the president then declares a "major" disaster and may allocate funds.

Under the request made by

Hughes, many federal agencies have statutory authority to provide disaster assistance to states and local governments in the absence of a "major" declaration by the president.

For instance, the Department of Defense can provide military assistance; the Corps of Engineers has authority to assist in flood fighting and to repair and restore flood control works; the Bureau of Public Roads can provide assistance to restore roads and bridges of the Federal Aid System; and the Department of Agriculture can provide many services to meet emergency need of agriculture.

SBA Can Lend

Also, the Small Business Administration can provide both direct and bank participation disaster loans to individuals and business concerns to restore or rehabilitate damaged or destroyed property.

In addition, the Public Health Service can provide assistance to states and local communities for emergency health and sanitation measures. The governor can still make a request for a major disaster declaration.

Under the term "major disaster," the available resources of ALL federal agencies may be used in combating the effects of the disaster, even to clearing debris.

Hutton said approximately a dozen federal agencies were in Oelwein Wednesday morning for the meeting, plus many state agencies.

Cleaning Up

Mayor Sam Mazziotti said Wednesday that Oelwein is 90 per cent through with its cleanup and that a marked, sight-seeing route has been established in the town for visitors. He stressed, however, that all visitors should stay on the routes marked to avoid interfering with the remaining cleanup.

Mazziotti also said that the curfew would remain in effect in Oelwein. He said the curfew starts at 7 p.m. with enforcement beginning at 9 p.m. It ends at 6 a.m.

The mayor stated that all business would open as usual at 8 a.m. Thursday, returning the city to a semblance of order.

"I would like to express my thanks to all the people who have helped us during this time of dire emergency," the mayor said. "To thank each one individually is my sincere desire but that will prove impossible. The efforts expended by the volunteers here in Oelwein is above description," Mazziotti

SAVE $100 on a complete FISHER 150 FM STEREO HI-FI SYSTEM

The Fisher 150 Baby Grand is an all-purpose three piece component system comprising of an all solid state FM Stereo receiver and two high-compliance speaker systems. To this system we have added a Garrard automatic turntable with a diamond stylus.

The speaker systems are exemplary, particularly in the reproduction of the lowest bass notes. While ordinary small size speaker systems tend to falter at the lower end of the bass range, the Fisher 150 speaker systems retain their tight, smooth and homogenous sound quality—a feat largely attributable to the high-mass voice coil system in the 6-inch bass speakers with its 2 pound magnet.

The 35-watt FM-Stereo receiver is the electronic heart of the system. Its FM tuner section incorporates a unique four-gang front-end, followed by four IF stages, two limiters, and a wide-band ratio detector. There is no other system at this moderate cost that has such sophisticated reception facilities. With it, the entire world of FM can be tuned in, and beautifully. The Fisher 150 includes an illuminated tuning meter to simplify tuning and has the STEREO BEACON that indicates a stereo broadcast and automatically switches the unit to stereo operation.

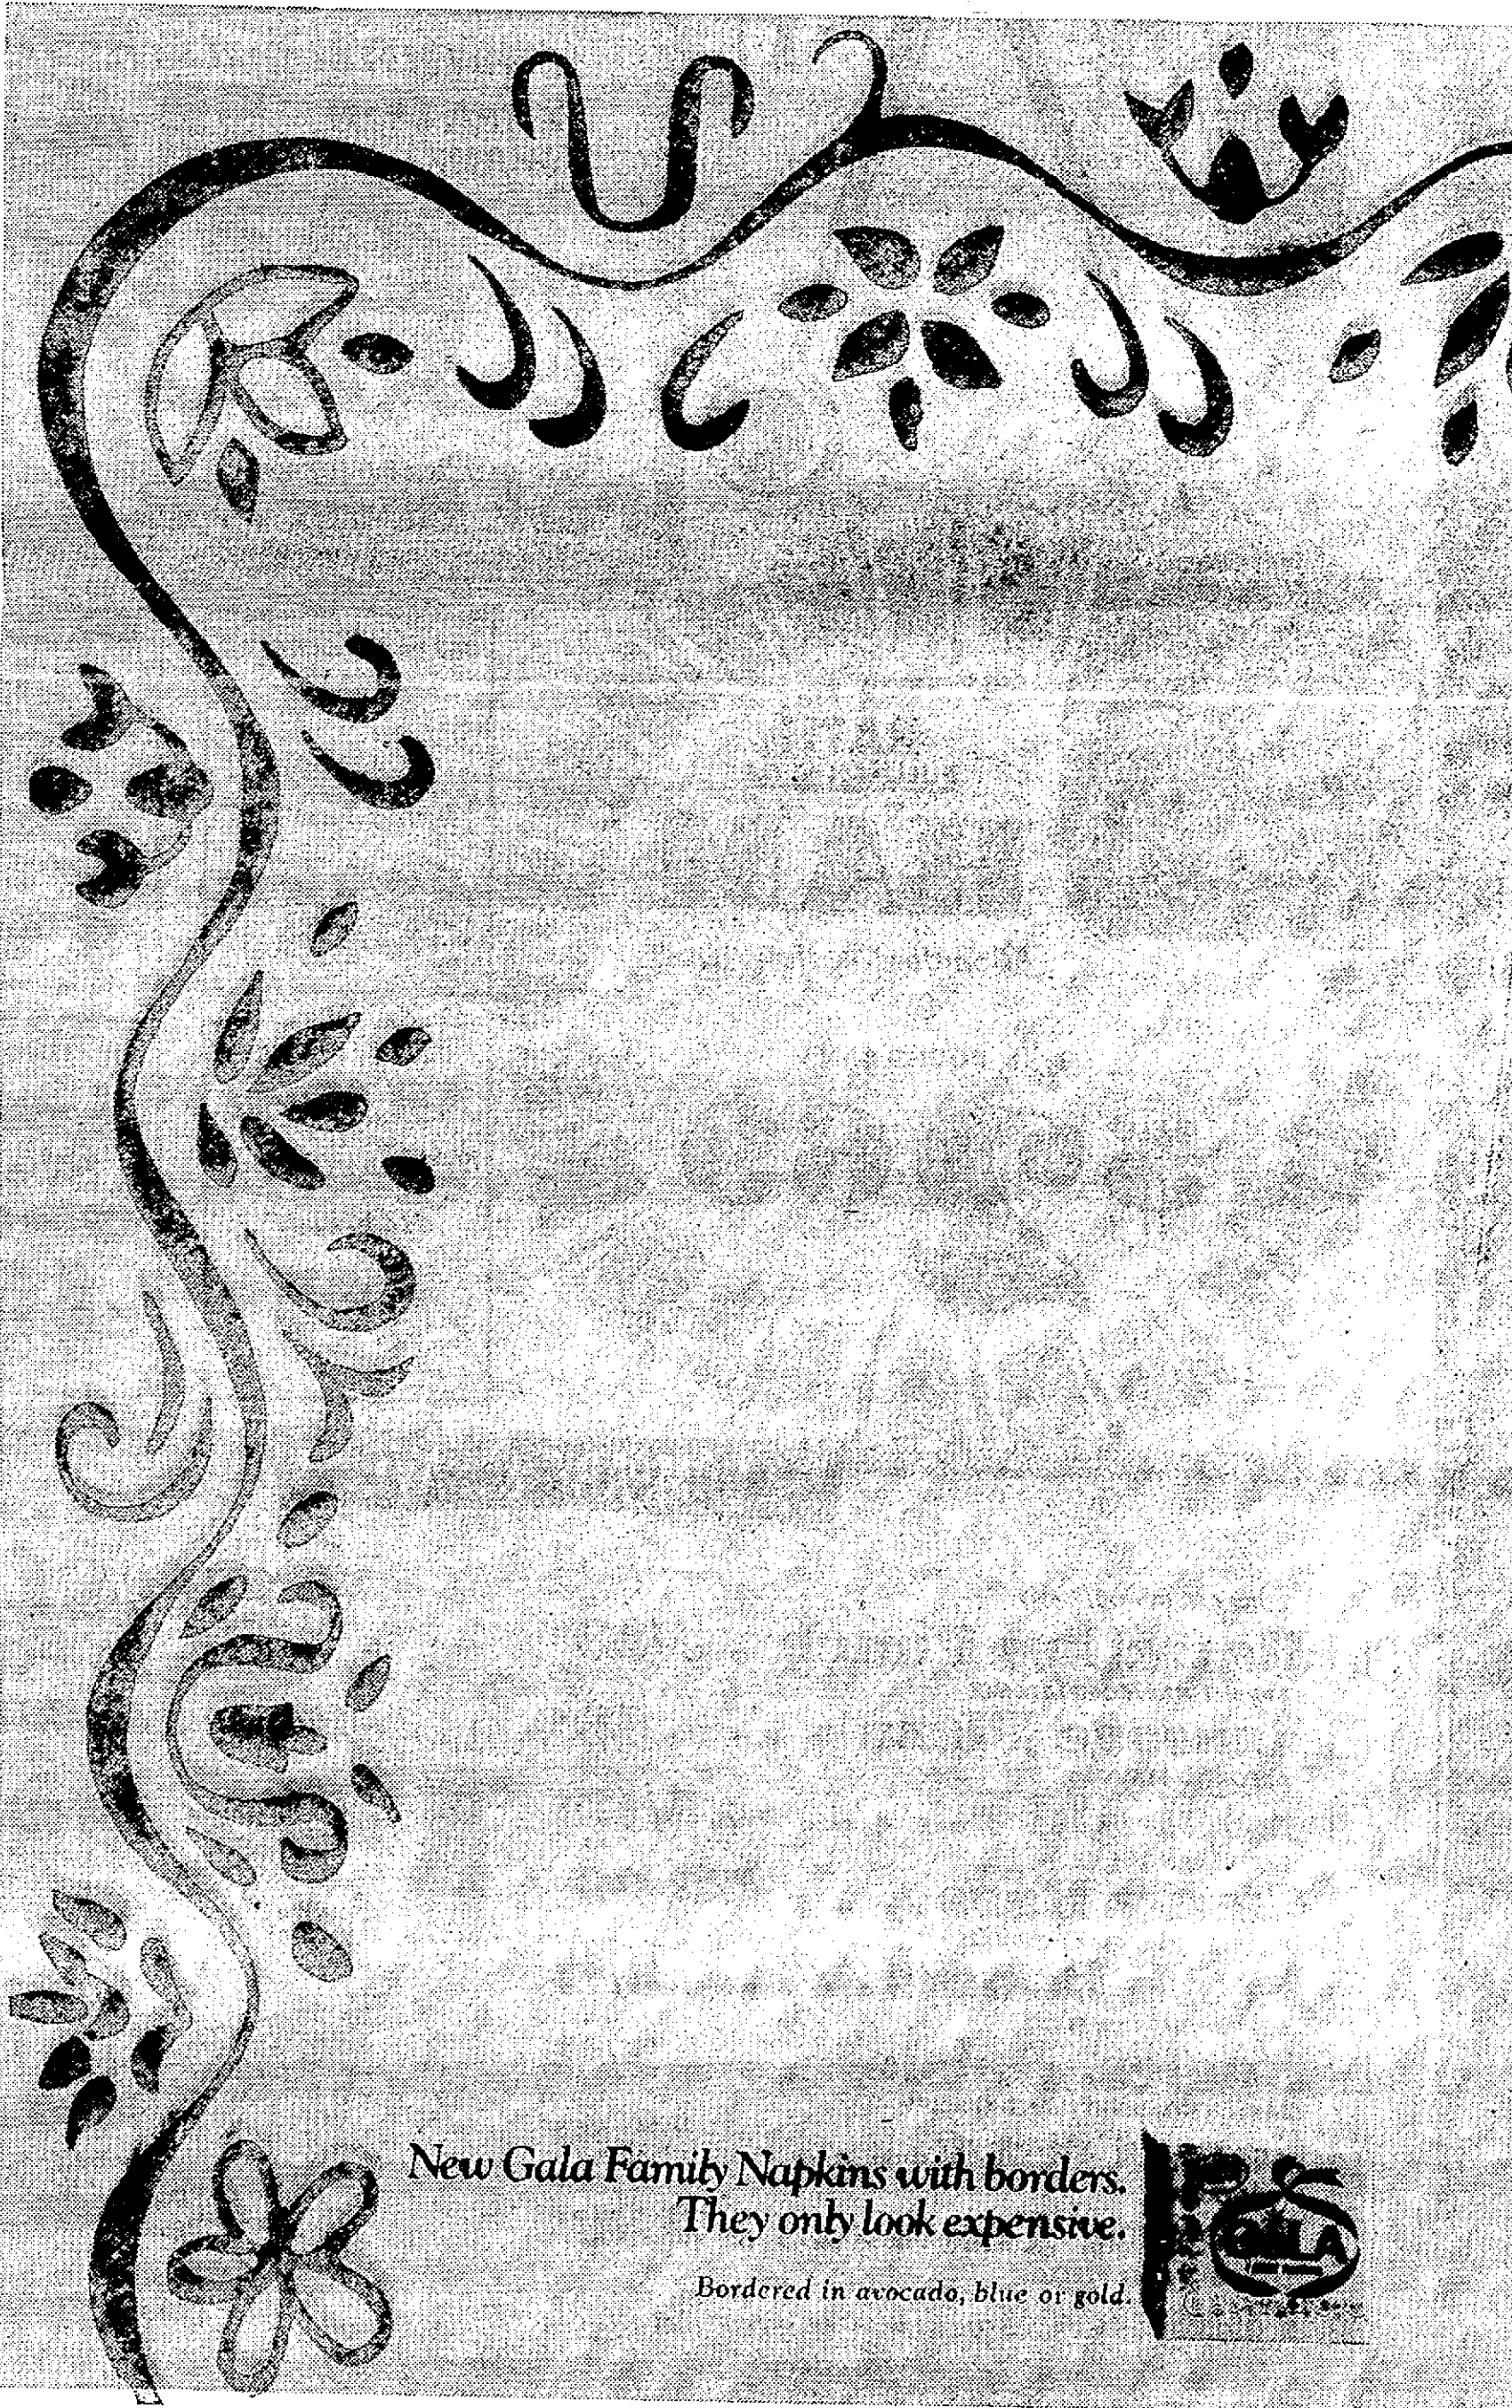

The Garrard 4-speed automatic turntable allows you to listen to your own stereo records.
